Partnership Updates

Literacy Initiative Focused on Effectiveness (LIFE)

- Completing the final year of the Hancock County project.
- Planning a significant final event with support from the Rural School and Community Trust and the Walmart Foundation.
- Planning the 2020 KinderCamp for July. This will be supported by a grant from the Rural School and Community Trust and the Walmart Foundation.
- Met with Ballad Health representatives to discuss a proposed grant to extend the KinderCamps to all Tennessee school districts in the Ballad Health footprint.

Rural LIFE (2018 EIR grant)

After the Spring 2020 administration of the TN Ready achievement tests, the formal experimental stage of the project will be completed. This milestone means we can serve all the schools in the Rural LIFE project (both the treatment schools and control schools). On February 12 or 13, we will meet with principals and lead teachers from the first group of schools to explain this impact on the project schools and to discuss our continuing (but reduced) support for two additional years. Teachers in the first group of schools will continue to be eligible for professional development opportunities; these schools will also have targeted support involving coaching and/or financial resources.

The second group of schools will be introduced to their increased level of support at an initial meeting of principals on March 10. They will meet their assigned RL coach, learn about the literacy & personalized learning goals of the project, and be introduced to the details of our cooperative efforts and role expectations.

Declining enrollment, a common theme in rural schools across the nation, has contributed to the gradual reduction of the number of project schools. Rural LIFE started with 72 schools; next fall that number will be 66 schools. Because of district-level consolidations and closings, the 36 control schools now number just 31. By the end of our five-year project, the number of schools could feasibly drop to just over 60 schools.

Instructional Coaching project (2019 EIR grant)

The planning portion of this five-year project is beginning in earnest. The Foundation will likely hire the first project employee in February; the second (and final) employee will be hired by May. At the NTC Annual Symposium on February 10, we will meet key staff from the lead partner (NTC) and the other three regional partners face-to-face for the first time. Planning will continue through the spring, with the first intensive activities scheduled regionally in the summer of 2020. We anticipate working with 60 area schools.

ETSU Dual Enrollment Partnership

The very promising dual enrollment program through ETSU has suffered greatly from a change in leadership. Changes in personnel and methods of enrollment have made it difficult/nearly impossible for schools to assist students. Only 7 students enrolled last term. We will likely turn our attention to working with Walters State and Northeast State.

NiswongerCARE College and Career Advising

- Advisors' work has focused primarily on assisting the 6,129 seniors in the service schools to submit the FAFSA application as required for financial aid awards and to maintain TN Promise eligibility. With the February 1 deadline approaching, current data show that 4,583 (75 %) seniors within the 30 high schools have completed this milestone in the college going process. This significantly exceeds the state's current rate of 64%.
- FAFSA Frenzy events were also held multiple times in each of the 30 high schools. These events provided families with the opportunity to receive individualized assistance while working on the FAFSA application.
- In addition to assisting students in applying for federal and state student aid, Advisors assisted 1,364 seniors in applying for scholarships and other financial aid.
- Staffing changes include the resignation of two Advisors effective this past December. Hunter Shipley was accepted into Milligan College's Physician's Assistant program, and Giuiliana Collett was accepted into Carson Newman University's Master of Arts in Teaching program.
- During the interim of hiring and training two new Advisors, the program directors and lead advisors filled in to provide uninterrupted services to students in each of these schools.
- Two new Advisors have been hired and will report to their assigned schools in February after receiving training to prepare them to assist students in the myriad of college going tasks. (Bios attached)
- Representatives from several regional post-secondary institutes including East Tennessee State University, Tusculum University, and Walters State Community College met with Advisors during monthly staff meetings to collaborate on how they can better assist future students in making the transition to postsecondary education.
- In addition to the regularly held monthly staff meetings, the program director, assistant directors, and all advisors received training as Reconnect Ambassadors. This training included information and details about the referral process to assist adults who are interested in taking advantage of the programs designed for them to obtain a postsecondary credential. As Ambassadors, Staff are better equipped to guide the many parents who have requested information about pursuing their own degree.
- Program Director, Denise Arnold, participated in the roundtable meeting sponsored by SCORE on December 17th. The effort focused on "Advising Students to Opportunity" and provided the chance to collaborate with other K-12 Educators, Higher Education Professionals, and Advising Organizations that support student success.
